

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

minutiae and common-sense detail alongside new methods of buying, accounting, treatment of employees, etc. It is comprehensive, extending all the way from "Retail Store Location" to "Welfare Work" and "Democracy in the Store." And, in spite of its prosaic subject, it is interestingly written. The sociologist would doubtless have been more interested in a discussion of ways and means of reducing the number of retailers and their burdensomeness to private consumers, but this would, with equal certainty, not be of great value to the profit-seeking storekeeper.

F. H. HANKINS

CLARK UNIVERSITY

Women Workers and Society. By ANNIE M. McLEAN, PH.D.
Chicago: A. C. McClurg & Co., 1916. Pp. v+135. $0.50, net.

We have here in very compact form a brief survey of the social problems connected with women in industry, both married and unmarried, and of the agencies, both public and private, which are attempting to aid them. The purpose of the book is to arouse interest in the needs of this growing class of workers by throwing into relief the conditions affecting them. It is popular and general in style and method.

On p. 29 the citation in the footnote is incomplete; on p. 46, there is a grammatical error in the verb "provides"; on p. 27, a printer's error, "is" for "it."

FRANCES FENTON BERNARD

Mt. HOLYOKE COLLEGE

Handicrafts for the Handicapped. By HERBERT J. HALL, M.D.,
and MERTILL M. C. BUCK. New York: Moffat, Yard Co., 1916. Pp. xiv+155. $1.25.

The authors have had in mind in the preparation of this book a textbook of a few crafts of special value to handicapped workers outside of institutions. It consists of detailed directions useful to the individual worker, to those dealing with handicapped labor in institutions, and to physicians in private practice. The book is based upon a conviction of the therapeutic value of work for those who are injured and idle, and upon the private and public economy involved in furnishing work which is partly or wholly a means of self-support to those whose regular occupa-